

Philosophy Lecture List for Trinity Term 2020

- IMPORTANT NOTE: in light of the Covid-19 pandemic, the Faculty is working towards online delivery of teaching in Trinity Term, as far as it is possible to do this. The current intention is to deliver lectures using either already available online material, recorded by Faculty members, or by using Panopto or Teams within Canvas. Graduate classes will be delivered through Teams.
- These methods may involve sign-up of some kind; the details are currently being worked out. For the time being, the list indicates the times at which the events will be given. Students should check back frequently as term approaches. It is possible that some events might not be delivered at all (either owing to illness or technical difficulties).
- It is likely that access to the online teaching will be restricted to students registered for Philosophy degrees.
- Lectures and classes begin on the first possible day after the beginning of Full Term (Sunday 26 April) unless otherwise stated. Lecture series run for weeks 1 to 8 unless otherwise stated.
- Classes will take place at the times specified. Lecture times are notional.
- The information below is subject to change. Please make sure that you check the Faculty’s website <http://www.philosophy.ox.ac.uk/lectures> for the most up-to-date information. Detailed course descriptions will be published in the Lecture Prospectus, available on that webpage. It is especially important at this time of uncertainty that you remain up-to-date. Also, check the Canvas sites.
- This information is correct as at 30 April 2020.
